Friend Garrison,

32

I have sent to your son William, in Boston, all the Anti Slavery books and pamphlets I have left. You can keep them, or give them away, or sell them on your own account, or do whatever you please with them.

I left the writing in "Spekes Travels in Africa", thinking you might perhaps like to keep it as a souvenir of David and I; unless you already have a copy.

Before Frank wrote to me, a year and a half ago, I had sent the greater part of our Anti Slavery documents to Mr. Phillips, for College libraries. I sent them to him because I thought he would know how to turn them to use, and his house was more accessible than yours or Mr. Sewall's.

Having no son or brother, nor any one to help me, it seems as if I never should get the accumulation of twenty years cleared out of the house; and I am obliged to work by slow instalments, because the excessive heat takes all strength out of me.

I sometimes think we are going right into the Sun, by an Express-Train.

Yours cordially,

L. Maria Child.
